DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 12-18 and 21-37 are allowed (Claims 1-11 and 19-20 are canceled by the Applicant).
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The primary reason for the allowance of claims 12-18 and 36-37 is the inclusion of the limitations of a transmitting unit which is configured to radiate a radar pulse into a space via a transmitting antenna; a receiving unit which is configured to receive via a receiving antenna a reflected wave of the radar pulse returned from the space; an analysis processing unit which explores an object existing in the space based on a reception output from the receiving unit; a control unit which controls at least one of the transmitting unit and the receiving unit based on an output from the analysis processing unit; and a conducting rim which is extended along an arrangement of the opposite ends of the metal posts to define the cavities, and which is connected to the opposite ends of the metal posts to short-circuit the metal posts. It is these limitations found in each of the claims, as they are claimed in the combination, that has not been found, taught or suggested by the prior art of record which makes these claims allowable over the prior art.

The primary reason for the allowance of claims 21-23 is the inclusion of the limitations of a feeding dielectric substrate provided at a side opposite to the one surface side of the dielectric substrate so as to interpose the ground conductor between the feeding dielectric substrate and the dielectric substrate; and a microstrip feeding line which is formed on the feeding dielectric substrate and which is connected to the feed pins, wherein excitation signals are supplied to the antenna elements through the feeding line and the feed pins. It is these limitations found in each of the claims, as they are claimed in the combination, that has not been found, taught or suggested by the prior art of record which makes these claims allowable over the prior art.

The primary reason for the allowance of claims 24-26 is the inclusion of the limitations of a plurality of antenna elements which are arranged and formed on an opposite surface of the dielectric substrate, wherein each of the antenna elements is formed into a square-shaped spiral or a circular spiral having a central end portion, wherein the antenna elements include first and second groups of antenna elements, the antenna elements in the first group being arranged at a same first array angle around axes perpendicular to the opposite surface of the dielectric substrate and the antenna elements in the second group being arranged at second array angles different from the same first array angle around axes perpendicular to the opposite surface of the dielectric substrate, respectively; and a feed unit configured to supply first and second excitation signals to the first and second groups of the antenna elements through the feed pins, wherein the first excitation signals excite the first group of the antenna elements to produce main polarization components which are in-phase and cross polarization components which are in-phase, and the second excitation signals excite the second group of the antenna elements to produce main polarization components which are in-phase and cross polarization components which are out-of-phase. It is these limitations found in each of the claims, as they are claimed in the combination, that has not been found, taught or suggested by the prior art of record which makes these claims allowable over the prior art.

The primary reason for the allowance of claims 27-29 is the inclusion of the limitations of a circularly polarized antenna element formed on an opposite surface of the dielectric substrate in a square-shaped spiral with a predetermined number of turns interlinked with one another, each turn having a conductive line arranged at an angle of 90° and having a length of a_0 or an integer multiple of a_0 , wherein a_0 is a basic length with a predetermined element width W ; and a conducting rim which is extended along an arrangement of the opposite ends of the metal posts to define the cavity, and which is connected to the opposite ends of the metal posts to short-circuit the metal posts. It is these limitations found in each of the claims, as they are claimed in the combination, that has not been found, taught or suggested by the prior art of record which makes these claims allowable over the prior art.

The primary reason for the allowance of claims 30-32 is the inclusion of the limitations of first and second circularly polarized antenna elements formed on an opposite surface of the dielectric substrate, wherein the first circularly polarized antenna element has a first polarization rotation direction, and the second circularly polarized antenna element has a second polarization rotation direction opposite to the first polarization rotation direction; and conducting rims which are extended along an arrangement of the opposite ends of the respective arrays of the metal posts, and which are connected to the opposite ends of the respective arrays of the metal posts to short-circuit the respective arrays of the metal posts. It is these limitations found in each of the claims, as they are claimed in the combination, that has not been found, taught or suggested by the prior art of record which makes these claims allowable over the prior art.

The primary reason for the allowance of claims 33-35 is the inclusion of the limitations of a transmitting antenna for a radar device which includes a first group of circularly polarized antenna elements; a receiving antenna for the radar device which includes a second group of circularly polarized antenna elements, wherein the first and second groups of the circularly polarized antenna elements are formed on an opposite surface of the dielectric substrate, the first group of the circularly polarized antenna elements having a first polarization rotation direction, and the second group of the circularly polarized antenna elements having a second polarization rotation direction opposite to the first polarization rotation direction; and conducting rims which are extended along an arrangement of the opposite ends of the respective arrays of the metal posts and which are connected to the opposite ends of the respective arrays of the metal posts to short-circuit the respective arrays of the metal posts. It is these limitations found in each of the claims, as they are claimed in the combination, that has not been found, taught or suggested by the prior art of record which makes these claims allowable over the prior art.
